

New Energy Movement Announces
New Executive Director
*Susan Manewich

January 16, 2016

The grassroots nonprofit New Energy Movement (NEM) today announced conscious leadership consultant Susan A. Manewich as its new Executive Director. The announcement was made by NEM President Joel Garbon during a presentation to an audience of hundreds at the Architects of the New Paradigm Conference in San Rafael, California.

At the close of his address, Garbon offered words of praise for his new colleague. “New Energy Movement is delighted to have Susan join our team as Executive Director. Susan’s expertise in organizational behavior and emotional intelligence will be a welcome asset as we seek to dramatically expand our educational outreach to the public and our advocacy for inventors of breakthrough energy technologies. She has the experience, creativity, deep listening skills, and commitment to high ethics that are required to be an effective and trusted leader and team-builder in the new energy field. Susan will be an outstanding ambassador of New Energy Movement’s mission!”

Manewich brings with her 20 years of professional experience in the areas of leadership consulting, emotional intelligence, and resonant technology. Her work has been consistently praised by clients around the globe, including Harvard Business School, Yale University, University of Chicago GSB, London Business School and many others. She is the author of multiple published works on emotional intelligence, and has been a featured speaker at various conferences in North America and Europe.

Growing up in Massachusetts, her undergraduate education at Westfield State College was focused on the science of organizational behavior and development. Prior to earning her master’s degree at Springfield College, Susan was a participant with the PEER (Program for Extraordinary Experience Research) group in Cambridge under famed Harvard researcher Dr. John Mack. Her passion is to better understand human dynamics and the interplay between consciousness and technology, with the goal of facilitating humanity’s successful transition through complex global challenges.

New Energy Movement is a 501(c)(3) Public Charity. Your support is welcome. Please visit us at www.newenergymovement.org.